City Newberry's undergoing renovation

By NAN WATERS

Like many women reaching the half century mark, the 50-year-old J. J. Newberry Store at 34 N. Main St. in Carbondale is undergoing a face-lift.

New sidewalks, new glass windows and doors are being installed by the Charles H. Schultes Co. of New Cumberland, and renovations may take as much as eight weeks, according to Paula Tynyk, store manager.

Costs of renovations to the North Main Street facade of Newberry's could reach $25,000, according to officials at the store's parent company, the McCrory Corporation of York. New lighting and a new heating and air conditioning system, utilizing heat pumps, cost another $35,000, McCrory officials said.

Access to the store through the North Main Street entrances will be available during the remodelling, Miss Tynyk told the Mirror and the Salem Avenue entrance will also be open.

McCrory's bought out the Newberry chain some eight years ago. The first McCrory store, located in Scottsdale 100 years ago, was recently destroyed by fire, but the Carbondale store is one of 850 stores throughout the United States.

Other stores purchased by the chain include H. L. Green and the McClelland's
